Foreword

*"Money, which represents the prose of life, and which is hardly spoken of in parlors without an apology, is, in its effects and laws, as beautiful as roses."
-Ralph Waldo Emerson, 1844*

Over the years, I have been astounded at the undue attention that my readers, and most Americans, it seems, have about money. I remember writing about the American soldiers dying needlessly in Vietnam; about the totalitarian socialist influences behind riots in the streets, and socialism, insolvency and surrender of the American values. My efforts, apart from a large cadre of patriots, seemed to fall upon disinterested ears. Yet my 1968 Almighty Buck, a lesson about the difference between "legal tender" and "lawful money," ran for a dozen printings. Those folks who followed my suggestions, in those days, bought silver coin at face value and sold it at four-times face value in 1973, and then bought gold coin at $58.00 per ounce. They then sold it, or part of it, at $800.00 per ounce. Even those who held it, have made 700% on their money. As Emerson stated, if you know money's effects and laws, it can be as beautiful as roses. Smell the roses, but don't love the money.

The Republic And The District

In my recent pamphlet, Sui Juris {pardon me but... #5}, I went into considerable detail concerning the two United States as defined at law and set forth in Black's Law Dictionary. {{Although my sixth edition of Black's contains a definition for the term United States, I notice that the seventh edition does not. I'm relatively certain that its part of the disinformation set forth by those in control... and I'll leave it at that.}} The President of the United States lawfully governs two different countries, two nations, if you will, operating under two different sets of laws. {{If you have read Sui Juris... pardon me but #5, or Perceptions, you are already aware of this fact.}} Both of these nations are legitimate and sovereign. They were set up that way for very good, and lawfully proper reasons by our Founding Fathers. If you will bear with me for the benefit of the hundreds of new readers since September, 1994, the Republic of the United¹ States is one nation under God consisting of the several states, now numbering fifty. There is some controversy concerning Hawaii and Alaska as being "legitimate" states of the Republic since they are not contiguous, that is, connected together by land boundaries. My personal belief is that these two states may well be lawfully part of the other nation, the Legislative Democracy of Washington, District of Columbia, as are Guam and the Virgin Islands, and other islands of that nation identified at law as The District. So, there exists the federal United States consisting of Washington, D.C., The District, with its states sitting on islands around the world which we have obtained by military conquest, and Alaska which was purchased with funds originating from Washington, D.C.. So, since Washington, The District, bought Alaska from Russia, it seems to be reasonable to assume, unlike the Louisiana Purchase from France consisting of contiguous lands, that The District still owns what it paid for. Whether or not Alaska and Hawaii are part of the Republic or {{part of}} The District is not really critical to this article, but it is something to seriously think about in these times of political deception.

There has been a lot of loose talk in recent years, especially by wolf pastors such as the Rev. Jesse Jackson, that Washington, D.C., The District, ought to be made into the 49th State {{presumably he meant the 51st State}}, so that its federal residents might enjoy all the same rights as are held by the national citizens of the Republic. The Bill of Rights, those glorious Ten Amendments of the Constitution of The National Republic, do not apply, and have no lawful standing in any other nation, including within The Federal District. The District, The Federal United States, 'operates under Roman Civil Law', and extends only certain "civil rights" {{not unalienable rights}} to its subjects, individuals and persons {{you should look up the definition of 'person' in Black's Law Dictionary}}. The District cannot, and does not even pretend to extend to its subjects, individuals and persons the Republic's National Constitutional Rights.

¹ *1 Some legal authors write this as united States, with the lower case "u" to distinguish it from the federal United States. That is fine with me, but somehow I prefer proper names to be capitalized and I will keep the capital 'U' herein. {{I am one such individual... these united States of America.}}

It is only to those persons, subjects and individuals whose American citizenship originates from The District {{these would be Fourteenth Amendment citizens or those born in the District or its territories}} that are subject to the Individual Federal Income Tax, even if they choose to live in various parts of the fifty states² as a matter of personal preference. Bonafide citizens of the national Republic are not subject to the income taxing regulations imposed upon the individuals, persons and subjects of the federal nation known as The District, any more than they would be subject to the taxes imposed upon the citizens of Germany or Mexico. If you do not think of The District as another nation, and that you are a nonresident alien³ to it, even though governed by the same Congress that you elected by vote for your Republic, you will have missed the point and will remain forever confused. {{Boy that's the right term... confused. The term non-resident alien is a creation of IRS laws. To understand its use you must come to grips with the fact that the District is a foreign jurisdiction. Foreign to the Republic of the united States of America. The jurisdiction of the District of Columbia is not inclusive (within the Republic), it is exclusive (outside, or in legal jargon, <without> the Republic). This jurisdiction has its own laws which include the income tax laws. Income Tax law is NOT law of the republic. The jurisdiction of the District is corporate, municipal in nature, but still a corporation. Essentially, the United States Government is Walmart with guns, and will use their guns to force you to buy their products and services. If you check Dun & Bradstreet on-line, you will find that every Office, Agency, Bureau and Department of Government is publically traded for profit. The Buck Act (a corporate statute), paved the way for the several states to also become corporations, municipal in nature, under the laws of the District of Columbia, making these corporate states subject to its jurisdiction, that is the District's jurisdiction. Thus the several states have also become corporations, municipal in nature, followed by the counties of the states and in most cases, the cities. All of these corporations tracing their existence to District law. Thus we have California, republic of, and we have the STATE OF CALIFORNIA, corporate. They are completely separate, one has nothing to do with the other.

Now we need to comprehend Reside. You reside when... you live in an area that is not the home of your citizenship. For example, if you were a Frenchman living in California, you would reside in California because France is the home of your citizenship. If you are a citizen of the District (a United States citizen) living in California, you too reside, because the home of your citizenship is in the District⁴. Now, if you are a natural individual (a legal term) and are a {{capital "C"}} Citizen of the Republic of the united States of America ONLY, then, when you live in California, you are not residing because you are living in the home of your Citizenship... the California Republic. Notice I used the term ONLY. That's because you may have dual citizenship, most Americans do. The fourteenth Amendment provided such dual citizenship to the freed slaves. Read it for reference if necessary.

² {{Remember, California, republic of, is not the STATE OF CALIFORNIA (corporate)!}}

This is the common $5.00 note that you {{currently – 2015}} carry in your pocket. It was issued as debt against the citizens of The District by the privately owned Federal Reserve Bank. It is not lawful money and is not convertible into lawful money. It is not a certificate of any assets, but it is a dishonored evidence of federal debt. Its classification of being Federal and a note is shown on the top of the note.

With that understood, we are close to understanding the term non-resident alien. As you probably know, most businesses are licensed. But you need to remember the origin of the license is one of those municipal corporations... either the city, the county or the state... sometimes the Federal Government. All existing under District law, making their license and business existence foreign to the Republic, or looking at it in reverse, making the citizen of the Republic foreign (or Alien) to their business-jurisdiction. Since the Citizen of the Republic does not reside when he is living in the Republic, he becomes, in District / IRS Tax Law, a non-resident alien (their terminology, not mine). But that is once again, from their point of view, from the outside looking into the Republic. Hopefully that explains it well enough to no longer be confusing. The Federal Zone may provide some insight on this matter. If a non-resident alien wants to work for an employer licensed by government, he would file a IRS W8 form, a certificate of foreign status, which is the paperwork the employer needs to show the IRS why he is not withholding taxes from the non-resident alien.}}

The very reason why millions of Americans pay billions of their hard-earned money to the {{foreign}} nation known as The District, when they may not be lawfully required to do so, is that they have never been taught the difference between the national Republic and The Federal District {{thank you public school system where the curriculum is government controlled instead of Teacher controlled}}. Since citizens of the Republic are not lawfully required to pay the Federal District taxes, The District has given them the option to voluntarily pay the Federal Income Tax if they wish to do so, providing they sign certain forms so that The District can legally accept their money. All of this was taught very carefully in my Sui Juris pamphlet. These 40 high-attention-span pages are available from our office for $3.00 post paid. Sui Juris is not only an interesting pamphlet and legal document, but it is my personal letter to The District Director of the Internal Revenue Service, Inc., when The District unlawfully attempted to claim me as one of their persons or individuals and thus "shanghai" me from The Land to *The Sea*⁵, and coerce me to pay their taxes or be keelhauled⁶. The sordid matter pursuant to The District versus Nord Davis, Jr. is not yet formally resolved. Perhaps I should put it this way: It is resolved in my mind but not yet in theirs. Because of the intrinsic dishonesty of both the nature of the IRS regulations and the amoral agents The District carefully selects to enforce them, this matter may never be resolved. So, here, at least, you have two $5.00 bills which clearly distinguish between the two nations in the realms of currency and commerce. I only wish that the political and citizenship distinctions were so easy to see and understand.

There is yet another way of demonstrating these two nations and the fact that our political leaders know full well what I am teaching here. Flip back to the cover for a moment and examine the Lady on the top and "Money. In the usual and ordinary acceptation it means coins and paper currency used as circulating medium of exchange, and does not embrace notes, bonds, evidences of debt, or other personal or real estate." - Blacks Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition.

⁵ The law of the land, or if your prefer, the law of the republic, is the Common Law. The law of the Sea is Admiralty, which is the law of the District.

notice her foot extending below her skirt. Do you see that she is walking? Where do you walk? You walk on the land. {{The point being made here is that there is the law of the land (the Common Law - the law of the Republic) which is entirely different than the law of the sea (Admiralty law - also known as Roman Civil Law... the law of a Democracy and the law of the District - the corporate United States). Remembering that a Democracy is two wolves and one sheep sitting down to discuss what they are going to have for dinner (majority rule). But in a representative Republic, the wolves have no more power or authority than the individual sheep does (rights are individual not collective and might (numbers) does not make right).}} George Saint-Gaudens is the famous sculptor who set forth the likeness of the Lady of Christian America shown here as a Lady of The Land. Thinking for a moment in Christian and Biblical terms, do you see her as a Lady with her hair as her "covering?" Mr. Saint-Gaudens lived from 1848 to 1907, and you will note that this Lady of Liberty is wearing a typical formal or wedding dress of that era, an exciting significance that I will teach in the new lessons of Star Wars.

The Law of The Land is the law of substance, quid pro quo, something for something. You exchange your labor for silver and gold-coin under the Law of the Land⁷. You have heard the term, as such and so is "the law of the land," haven't you? Why do you think that this phrase is used? Is there any other kind of law, for heaven's sake? Yes, there is the Law of the Sea, the law of international commerce and the law of nations. When it comes to how we deal with other nations at law, such as those laws about bringing back citizens who have fled prosecution, for instance, what laws do we use? Not the Constitution of the Republic, but this law of nations, sometimes called Admiralty Law, or the Law, of the Sea. Another term for it is The Roman Civil Law. Under Roman Civil Law, which is a terrible blend of civil and criminal statutes, there is no such thing as Rights of the accused. Such a legal concept as individual Rights is almost unheard of anywhere but in our Republic. You will be happy to learn that all of the United Nations laws, and the soon enforcement of them under Janet Reno {{and those of same ilk}}, have the character of the Law of the Sea. If you like the IRS tactics, you will love what's coming next.*

Northpoint Tactical Teams Operational Footnote. The new readers of On Target! must understand that we are not a source for research information. We are not standing by anticipating 20,000 sets of 'Twenty Questions.' In the last three years, we have distributed over 600,000 pamphlets. Therefore, we cannot answer in copious detail all the letters that are thus generated. We are not going to even try. Our recent pamphlet, Sui Juris, has already passed the 40,000 copy mark and our reprint edition is scheduled to be off the press by April 1, 1995. You must understand that there are times when it is almost impossible to keep abreast of the acknowledgments to the letters we receive. If you can accept a short, hand-written note concerning some problem you have, leave a wide margin upon which we can write that note. Those of you who are ordering printed materials should write the word "Order" on the front of the envelope. Only those letters designating that they are placing orders will be processed ahead of our general mail. If you have a meeting coming up, order enough ahead of time for the packages to get to you. No orders will be accepted over the telephone no matter how serious your problem or how important your meeting is. Do not have your orders delivered by third parties, even Mrs. Davis, as this breaks our chain of processing priorities. - Northpoint

⁷ It is an equal exchange, thus there is no gain or profit which would be subject to taxes.

The IRS Codes are not law. {{ While true, this one is going to be difficult for most people to comprehend without a little additional information. By virtue of the constitution, Congress was given exclusive legislative authority over an area of ten miles square that the constitution calls the District. Later to become Washington, District of Columbia. This means that Congress may make law for the District as well as for the Republic of the United States of America. This gives Congress a dual-character. Therefore, how do we, the people, distinguish the difference between laws for the Republic and corporate laws passed for the jurisdiction of the District? Good question! Go to any law library and pick up a book of United States Code, printed by the government printing office and not one of the other law book publishers, like West or Bancroft Whitney. On a couple pages you will find listed by name, all fifty U.S. Titles. As you look at their names you will see that some have an asterisk beside their name and some do not. When you look at the bottom of the page to see what the asterisk means, you will see... ‘this title has been passed as positive law.’ Positive Law titles are passed in accordance with the constitution and its limitations, they are constitutional in nature and they apply... to both citizens of the District and Citizens of the Republic. Titles which are not Positive Law are not passed in accordance with the constitution and are not constitutional in nature. They are corporate law, which is a misnomer, actually they are corporation rules and apply only to those persons who have voluntarily placed themselves, by contract, in that corporate jurisdiction.

You may have noticed that when the House of Representatives passes a measure it is identified approximately as follows: HR1234. And in the Senate the measure might be identified as SR5678. Because of Public Schools whose curriculum is controlled by government, most Americans have no idea what meaning the ‘R’ might have. The ‘R’ stands for resolution. This is corporate law⁸, not law of the Republic. If Congress were passing law for the Republic, the identifier would contain an ‘H’ only for the House, and an ‘S’ only for the Senate as does the majority of Acts comprising Title 18.

Therefore, to enact a statute into law, meaning law of the Republic, it must pass constitutional muster, otherwise it is not law... at least not law of the Republic. It might be law of some other jurisdiction, but not of the Republic. Title 26, all of your IRS laws are non-positive law. That is, they are not law of the Republic, but are law for, and of, the District. Therefore, Mr. Davis accurately states... “The IRS Codes are not law,” meaning they are not law of the Republic (Law of the Land) to which an individual who holds only Citizenship in the Republic would be subject. There is a BUT part to this though. The BUT part is... but, you can be held subject to any body-of-law if you are not willing to stand up, claim your rights and challenge their jurisdiction.}}

Their statutes were never enacted as law for The Republic, but are merely House/Senate Joint Resolutions for The District, under the concepts of the Law of the Sea. Under the Law of the Sea, you do not deal in substance, i.e. silver and gold coin, or instruments convertible to silver and gold coin, you deal only in {{commercial}} paper. As the signs on our banks properly state:

⁸ Most law of the corporate United States is un-constitutional!

Your deposits are fully backed by the faith and the credit of the U.S. Government. Faith? Faith? Good grief, who feels secure knowing that his money is backed by only the faith of the public in The District? Yet, even faith in The District may be rational when compared by the credit of The District.⁹ The District has declared a secret but formal bankruptcy at least four times since 1933, and never paid off its debts. The last time The District declared bankruptcy was in 1992, if my memory serves me well. Any citizen who acted in this irresponsible fiscal manner we would call a deadbeat. Well, that's how it is with the Law of the Sea. International bankers cannot foreclose on a debtor nation. All they can do is cause another nation who owes them money to go after them in war. War is "kingdom towing." The war goes on long enough so that the citizens will submit to high enough taxes to pay their nation's international debts.

Whenever you see any term preceded by the letters "U.S." you will know that it is referring to the nation known as The District and its agencies. For instance, the U.S. Navy is a District entity, properly enforcing the Law of the Sea. I am not a U.S. citizen, meaning a citizen of The District. I am a Citizen¹⁰ of The United States of America, meaning a Citizen of the Republic. My Lady of Liberty is the Caucasian Lady, dressed as a Christian, seen on our {{silver}} coins, the financial substance of the Republic.

Now let's look at the woman shown on the lower figure on the front cover. Where is this woman standing? Is she standing on the land? She is standing on a monument, but where is this monument located? She stands on an island, in the sea and out of the sea, at the entrance to New York harbor. She stands for the Law of the Sea, not the Law of the Land. Carefully look at her countenance, an indication of her mood and emotions. Is she a victorious defender of liberty or does she have another agenda? Does she appear as a bride inviting the Lord Jesus Christ with a motto such as, In God We Trust, or does she appear to be one of those women whom any man would do well to stay clear of?

True, the tablet in her left hand has the inscription of July 4, 1776. There were many things going on at that time in our history besides the Revolutionary War. The Unitarian Church was spawned and had a Chair at Harvard Divinity School by the year 1800, challenging the great Rock-solid thought-theology of the Scottish Covenanters with the Puritan work ethic. More than 40 of the 57 men who signed the Declaration of Independence held this almost forgotten Christian position for life and government. This was also known as the Age of Enlightenment, a philosophical antithesis of Christian liberty. This was the general philosophy that spawned socialism, and Karl Marx's work entitled the Communist Manifesto. It was the age of Darwin and C. I. Scofield, and the shifting of the Christian Church from its moorings under the Protestant Reformation identified by the Puritans and the Pilgrims, to the "enlightened higher criticism" of the Bible. This Lady of Liberty did not seek those who had in their genes a proven track record of hard work, inventive genius and scholarship under the Protestant Work Ethic. Instead she sought to attract "huddled masses" who were acclimated {{whom are accustomed to...}} to the Roman Civil Law from whence they came. They were well adjusted to being told what to do {{good sheeple in other words}}. Spring as they did from their old European false matriarchal thought theologies, they would become good subjects¹¹ of The District and fodder for the District's continuous wars.

⁹ I will always print The District in bold type so that the student will always remember that we are not talking about the American Republic and its regulations, debts, or courts, but a completely different nation.

¹⁰ The term "Citizen" is capitalized in the organic Constitution, but in the Fourteenth Amendment, which creates a new class of citizenship, the term "citizen" is not capitalized. Most people, if they notice it at all, think that it is just an oversight. It is not an oversight. Uppercase "C" - "Citizen" does not equal lowercase "c" - "citizen!" Each of these is a different class of citizenship.

Perhaps it is important here to show that this Enlightened Liberty was first proposed by a Frenchman right after the American Civil War. It has been said by many historians that before the War Between the States, we were called Virginians or Vermonters. After this Roman Civil War, however, we lost our state distinctions and became simply Americans. Why? Well, the Frenchman Edward de Laboulaye knew, if most Americans today do not, that the Roman Civil War dramatically altered the American form of government. The sovereign status of the Republic of the States, was subordinated by virtue of the South losing the war, to that of The District which had won that war. The Constitution was amended to reflect these subtle changes. The Law of the Land, which provided unheard of prosperity, was to be gradually eroded to be supplanted by the Law of the Sea, the enlightened self-interest of those who held one of the various competing international government philosophies. {{President}} George Bush {{senior}} called his enlightened philosophy "1,000 points of light" and some of us knew for sure what his agenda was to be.

This cartoon has been republished here through the courtesy of Criminal Politics Magazine of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Before she was called the Statue of Liberty, she was formally called "Liberty Enlightening The World."

Digging in even deeper, we find that the Statue of Enlightened Liberty was designed by a Jewish French sculptor, named Frederic Auguste Bartholdi. It is commonly believed that he used his Jewish mother as his model. The cartoon printed on the previous page was first published in Life Magazine in 1907 with a circulation of over 2 million. It was more recently published by the Hebrew Union College, a Jewish Institute of Religion in Cincinnati, Ohio, in their pamphlet Jews In American Satire and Humor. While Christian Americans may be astounded, be assured that the Jews among us know who their Lady of Enlightened Liberty is and what she really stands for.

¹¹ Subject. One who is under the dominion of a monarch or reigning prince; one who owes allegiance to a government or ruling power, is subject to its laws, and enjoys its protection. – Oxford English Dictionary

As you look at the Lady of Enlightened Liberty, what is that hat or crown that she is wearing? Where in the world did the artist or sculptor come up with that design? In all your life, did you ever see any other lady wearing such an unusual hat? Here are a couple of thoughts for you to consider.

Do you suppose that the Prophet Daniel ever saw the United States in his interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's curious dream? He correctly forecast the fall of ancient Babylon, with its head of gold and the rise of Medo-Persia, with its breast of silver, as the 2nd Kingdom that was even greater than Babylon. Next, he saw the rise of the 3rd Kingdom which we now know was the Greek Empire, with its belly of brass, under Alexander, The Great. Finally Daniel told us of a curious 4th Kingdom, identified as having legs of iron. It was this 4th Kingdom, the Roman Empire, that was in power at the time of Christ's life on earth. With the allegory of the two legs, we know this Kingdom would be made up of two parts, which was first the military Roman Empire covering all the then known world, at least so far as the Romans were concerned. Following its collapse, it would become the Holy Roman Empire ruled by what has evolved into the Catholic Church. If Daniel was correct, that second part of the 4th Kingdom would reign, in one way or another, until Christ returns to set up His Kingdom here on the earth. Christ's Kingdom is the same as Daniel's 5th Kingdom. So timing world events from "head to toe" down Daniel's allegory in time, where are we now? Are we not in the time of the toes? Isn't Christ's Kingdom, however you have been taught to understand it, right around the corner? Are we not now in the exciting "toes of time?" More about that in the next section of Star Wars. {{If your first impression is the same as mine, you immediately think this would be a document on the high tech conquest taking place in space... it is not. Star Wars would be better titled the War of the Stars. Meaning the five point Christian Star and the six point Star of David (the Jewish Star). The goals and underlying philosophies of these two stars is no where near the same.}}

I am working on a future pamphlet titled "The Toes Of Time ," which will deal extensively with this 4th Kingdom as it fades out and the 5th Kingdom as it has begun to develop on the earth. Remember, we pray in The Lord's Prayer that "...Thy Kingdom come, thy will be done, on earth as it is in heaven." That prayer will be fully answered when His Kingdom is established here. The 4th Kingdom held power for more than 2,000 years, but during its power those foundations for the 5th were already being laid. The "toes-of-time" is that span of time when there began the rise of Christian influences around the earth, and the beginning of the decline of the Roman influences that we see across the world. No Roman Catholic nation anywhere in Europe or below the Rio Grande in the West, is considered today as even a minor power in the earth. Gone is the flower and power of Italy/Rome, Spain, France and Portugal, of the 16th and 17th Century, for instance. Why? Their lands are defiled by allowing Christians to be tortured and burned at The Stake.

As we will be proving beyond a shadow of doubt in the next section of Star Wars, the Jewish influences and control of the Roman Catholic Church began before the year 1,000 AD and the holocaust, [a Jewish and Roman Catholic, but not a German, term] of the Spanish Inquisition was brought about by these Jews in the name of the Catholic Church. In the 4th Kingdom's final fling, we see the Jewish Lady of Enlightened Liberty with her "eternal flame," similar to that on the grave of the late Catholic President Kennedy, beckoning the "huddled masses" of Roman Catholic southern Europe to partake of the good life established upon the land of this Wilderness by those holding the religious beliefs of the Reformation. So, the Jewish Lady of Enlightened Liberty stands at the gateway to the Jewish Banks of New York which now bleed the world of the substance of its labor in the form of forbidden usury. Remember as you think of the nation's debt, it is not a national debt, no matter how often you hear that term on TV. There is a huge, four trillion dollar federal debt¹² owed to these international bankers by The District. The District, and those of you who put your allegiance there, have the Lady of Enlightened Liberty. The Republic has the true Lady of Liberty, an Anglo-Saxon beautiful Christian Lady as depicted on our lawful money from the loving hands of Augustus Saint-Gaudens of Cornish, New Hampshire.

Remarks Concerning Sul Juris...

{{Before we begin, you may need a heads up if you've not yet read Sui Juris, pardon me but... #5. In this writing, Mr. Davis states that the IRS is a private corporation, not a government agency and that its phone listing is generally found in the private business section of the phone book. And he provides an example of this from a phone book. This is where we now pick up...}}

No sooner than we had mailed Sui Juris than we began getting pages torn out of telephone books showing a listing for The IRS, Inc. under the United States Government. Are you surprised? Millions of people, especially in large cities, still think that the IRS, Inc. is a government agency, and subsequently call the telephone operator when they do not find it listed there. So, as one phone company official told me, they have begun printing the IRS listing under U.S. Government as a convenience to their customers. I asked him if it was not really a convenience to the phone company so as to stop wasting their operator's time. That too, he admitted.

I have a reader who travels and lectures all over America. I had her check the phone books everywhere she went. She told me that the vast majority of phone books throughout America list the IRS with the "I" names and not under U.S. Government. Most large cities now list IRS under U.S. Government. Our new phone book here in Cherokee county, North Carolina still lists the Internal Revenue Service, Inc. in its proper place with all the rest of the "I" private names. Once Sui Juris is more widely distributed, I certain we can expect the Internal Revenue Service, Inc. to exercise its influence and force its name to be listed under the U.S. Government. Now, with all the evidence in Sui Juris proving that the IRS must be, and in fact is, a private corporation under the Uniform Commercial Code pursuant to the Clearfield Doctrine¹³, I think that this should settle the matter. We are not going to let our pamphlet hang or fall based upon where some phone company listed the IRS phone numbers. {{Understanding the Clearfield Doctrine can not be overstated. It is a most powerful tool when properly used. Read it, learn it, understand it!}}

¹³ In United States v. Clearfield Trust (318 U.S. 363), the Supreme Court ruled that when Government enters into commerce with its citizens, dealing in private commercial paper (Federal Reserve Notes), it loses sovereignty status, becoming no different than a private corporation, taking on the character of a mere private

Come on, folks, study our footnotes and look up our references. Everything is there for you, but we are not going to spoon-feed you. We now have footnotes upon footnotes, and we are not going down to a third level in Sui Juris. I do plan to publish a companion to Sui Juris someday soon, but do not write {{us}} for it until you see your first copy in the mail. Suggestion: Why don't you call the telephone company in your area and ask them why they put a private corporation in the phone book under U. S. Government?

Getting out of the system

We have had hundreds of letters asking us for information, and some procedure for them to “get out of the system so as to stop paying income taxes when they work for some employer.” We did not answer them. Instead, here is my answer to these folks. First, let me make it plain: I am not in the business of suggesting that every reader stop filing returns and paying income taxes if your status requires you to do so. However, if you wish to be {{acquire the status of}} Sui Juris, maybe you should quit that job if your employer insists upon going by the IRS contractual regulations. After all, you signed a W-4 IRS contract form, didn't you? If you are under a contract, even if you do not understand said contract, perhaps you will find it easier and less stressful to pay The District's debts to the International Monetary Fund, through the Federal Reserve {{Bank}} and the Internal Revenue Service, Inc., a private collection agency, whatever they want. You gave them permission to take your hard-earned money from your wages or salary, didn't you? Freeman and Sui Juris status is not an easy road, and it will not be the course to follow for everyone. Even if you know all the rules of football, you would not be wise to get into the scrimmage line opposite one of the Green Bay Packer's line men. Most our forefathers of ancient Israel preferred making bricks for the Egyptians to wandering the deserts as freemen, wondering where the next meal was coming from. However, we have provided you with enough information where, with study of the books recommended and after the fifth time you have read Sui Juris, hopefully you will know how to do what you feel is necessary, or know where to get that information. If you remain confused, or fearful, then my suggestion is that you remain a dutiful slave, and indentured servant, of The District.

person, which means, that if Government intends to compel an individual so some specific performance, then, like a private person, Government must be the holder-in-due-course of a contract or other commercial agreement that clearly identifies the specific performance they intend to compel, and further, be willing to enter this document into evidence.

The Internal Revenue Service, Inc.

Some write stating that there was an IRS established in 1862. That is true, but in those days we had silver and gold coin, and instruments convertible to silver and gold, as the Constitution directs. Once America went exclusively to {{debt currency}} paper instruments, pursuant to the Clearfield Doctrine and the UCC, the IRS had to become privately incorporated. This Internal Revenue Service income taxing-scheme was over-turned by the Supreme Court as unconstitutional. Look it up. It is known as the Pollack case in the 1890's. The subject of the Internal Revenue Service, Inc. is far deeper than can be addressed here, or in Sui Juris, because of certain Federal bankruptcies and the War Powers Acts that are involved. I plan to explore these in the upcoming companion to Sui Juris. You know, when you read Supreme Court cases, and their dissenting opinions, you are struck with the fact that often six intelligent jurists came to one opinion, and three equally intelligent and learned jurists came to an opinion in opposition to the majority. Their dissenting opinions have great value and this is why they are included in The Record. Likewise, there are intelligent and learned legal minds who have differed in one area or another concerning the thesis of Sui Juris. In the next section of this work, we will leave the realm of a letter and its footnotes to top officials in the Internal Revenue Service, Inc. and venture into other areas that bear upon my Sui Juris theory of the case. To be fair with all who read our work, we will provide those well-researched and concise dissenting opinions.

The reason I spent so many pages in this On Target! on the subject of “Which Lady?” is because I want you to understand, as clearly as I can state it, and you can envision it, the difference between citizens of the land with their money of substance, and the subjects of the sea and their unbacked paper debt instruments.

I have a copy of a so-called IRS Corporation, incorporated in the State of Delaware. However I do not now believe, based upon legal inputs since Sui Juris was published, that this is the formal IRS Corporation to which some of you are paying your taxes pursuant to your IRS 1040 Label Form contract. Some lawyers have suggested to me that this is only a corporation allowing the IRS to operate within the State of Delaware, a convenient location near The District. When you think about it, the Internal Revenue Service, Inc., because it is an entity of The District, must have the situs¹⁴ of its corporation within The District, and, as with so many other such entities, you will not be able to find it. We know it exists as a private corporation because of the way it acts pursuant to the Uniform Commercial Code and The Clearfield Doctrine, which is a 1942 *stare decisis*¹⁵ foundation of law.

¹⁵ Stare Decisis. Literally, to stand by things already decided. Once decided.

The Trial: U. S. vs. Phil Marsh, et al

We have one reader who thought so much of Sui Juris that he wanted me to be one of his defense witnesses in a trial that was going on at the very moment he got the copy of my pamphlet. [U. S. v. Phil Marsh, et. al. in San Francisco]. I told his people that I did not practice law; did not get involved in The District Court matters; and that I really would prefer not being a defense witness at his IRS trial. However, if Mr. Marsh felt that I would be even a minor value to help his case, of course I would come. However, I told his agent, "Send a subpoena through my Sheriff here, and do not use the Federal Marshal Service." For security reasons, I did not want that agency or the FBI to know that I might be away from my office for a week or more.

Well, the next thing I knew, I was called on the phone by the Asheville, North Carolina Federal Marshals informing me that they had a subpoena for me. I informed them that no Federal Agents are ever allowed on my wife's property. Would they serve me instead by FAX and let me acknowledge the subpoena by FAX? Reluctantly, they agreed.

The subpoena demanded that I be a defense witness; that I pay all my own expenses up front, including a $1,320 round-trip airfare, and the $50.00 per night hotel expenses and meals. They demanded that I put out my money, and then send a bill to the Federal Marshals with the hope that they repay me. Rather than take The District's money for any reason, I told them that I would pay my own expenses. Angry as I was about this breach of my security, I fully intended to do the best I could for the Defendants this one time. I love these people and would do almost anything for them. As it happened, the Judge imposed a strict time limit of only five more days, and I was excused from testifying, much to my relief. I did not want that high profile, and as you will see, it may have saved my life¹⁶.

As the U.S. v. Marsh trial worked out, the Internal Revenue Service, Inc., and The District, took a beating. There were multiple defendants all linked together in various alleged conspiracies with some 80+ different charges in all. All of the minor defendants were acquitted of all charges. In the matter of Phil Marsh and his lovely wife Marlene, her daughter Jill and son-in-law, Darrell Spencer, the jury was hung with 11 for acquittal and 1 for conviction. People who watched this long and confusing trial have told me that the Marsh case was saved primarily by one defense witness who did what I would have done, only better than I could, for all matters of the IRS was his primary interest. The District has spent millions of dollars trying to get Phil Marsh, et al, and had really lost. Usually, in a 11 to 1 hung jury, the case is not tried again.

¹⁶ Warning: The next time anyone thinks that I am so obliged because he paid $2.00 for my Sui Juris, my truthful testimony will be so phrased that it will not be helpful to the Defendant. So, friends and enemies both: Caveat.

The Death of a Witness

My readers, especially those who love Sui Juris, need to know about this man whose testimony had destroyed the IRS's fraudulent case against the Marshes. His name was James A. Weyer. Prior to going out to San Francisco to testify on behalf of Phil Marsh, Jim Weyer had completed beating the IRS in a legal action on behalf of another citizen and the IRS was forced to return all confiscated assets and pay all associated fees. He then instituted a multi-million dollar lawsuit against the IRS which is currently being handled by attorney Don George. One week before he was to leave for the Phil Marsh trial, two IRS agents from the criminal investigation unit out of Mansfield, Ohio, came to Jim Weyer's home and threatened him with criminal prosecution if he continued speaking out and beating them in court. He went west and shattered the IRS's case by quoting their own regulations against them. Mr. Weyer returned home, changed his clothes, and headed out for a high-powered tax seminar in Cincinnati, Ohio. Brother Weyer was found dead in his Cincinnati hotel room on Friday night, October 7, 1994, only four days after his testimony at the Phil Marsh trial. The authorities quickly ruled the cause of his death as a heart attack.* He was only 53 and believed by everyone who knew him to have been in perfect health. Lots of people die while in perfect health...

*Of course I cannot prove, and it would be unwise to even suggest, that Brother Weyer's death was anything but a natural one. I can say that his death only four days after testifying for the defense in the highest profile IRS case in 1994 is extremely unusual. This is especially curious in view of the IRS threats prior to his going of San Francisco. As we used to say in Latin America, "La historia cambio en la sierra. [The story changes in the jungle.] I simply wonder if he had apple pie for his supper meal. There is a unique poison used by intelligence forces that makes a death appear to be heart attack.

However, with the untimely death of Mr. Weyer, the IRS is free to move again against all of these defendants in what The District characterizes as "A Second Superceding Indictment." So, on February 6, 1995, The Federal Grand Jury returned a second indictment against Phil Marsh, et al, on another set of the same, or similar, charges. All defendants are going to have their trial all over again. Phil Marsh is an old man and in poor health. He is now bankrupt as a result of the IRS taking all his assets. I cannot imagine even The District feeling that a second trial is advantageous to the cause of the Internal Revenue Service, Inc. The first Marsh trial cost millions!

Greater love hath no man than this; that he lay down his life for his friends. Brother Jim knew the risks when he went to the Marsh trial.

The up-dated Sui Juris will be dedicated in loving memory of Ohio patriot James A. Weyer. Jim, we will see you first thing in The Morning...

Do you really want to be involved?

I would hope that Mr. Marsh's attorney does a careful study of the Supreme Court decision known as Bretz vs. Crist [436 U.S. 908]. It is a landmark decision pursuant to the issue of double jeopardy. I have not read the Marsh case, and would not presume to comment on it even if I had read it, but I might have them consider a pretrial hearing on the matter of jurisdiction. We must have fifty people who are in dire circumstances with the IRS. They can be helped, but of course we cannot help them. Frankly, I do not feel that the IRS is an issue that The Lord would have me spending my time and abilities working on. However, after watching again the Geraldo Show on the IRS, and other videos, I have long felt that there must be something constructive that Northpoint Teams should be doing. I do not know what incident will trip your wire, but the unmerciful treatment of Phil and Marlene Marsh has done it for me.

This is just for you to think about...

If you have problems with the IRS, they are going to deprive you of property without due process of law. By then, you may not have enough funds left to hire a real good IRS attorney, should you determine that this the only option left open to you. Mr. Marsh, a millionaire in his own right when I first knew him, has been reduced to pauper status. Even his trial attorneys were Court appointed public defenders, for heaven's sake! If you ever have trouble with the IRS, you may be looking at an attorney's retainer fee of $25,000.00 or more. You could almost graduate from law school for that kind of money. Think about it: Is that what you really want to do? If all the information you have on the IRS, Inc. is what you have learned in Sui Juris, and you do not begin a year of study before taking action, you are playing "leap-frog" with a unicorn!

An Limited Unorganized Collection Of Unexpected Typographical Errors for The Readers of Sui Juris

Sui Juris, page 13, footnote Col. 2, "without" should be "with" + page 14, Col. 2. last line "can" should be "and." Then the worst typo on page 19, the IRS phone number should be 1-800-829-3676, not 3686. I have been quoting my U.C.C. citations from the 1984 Anderson's Edition, and there have been some changes in the 1994 Edition. The new Anderson's costs around $800.00 so I do not have it. Hopefully our new law Library will one day be able to afford it. How can Anderson Publishing sell lawyers new sets of books if they do not change them around at least once every ten years? Students write us in a hot rage because some citation I have given does not say what I said it did. So on page 30 § 3-305:52 is now § 305:78. Likewise, on page 31. § 3-403:42 is now § 3-403:73. Thanks, Barney B. and Walt M. Page 34, Col 1, Line 9, change the words "it for" to "for it." That will read better. No student should write me without a cover statement that he has read the seven books listed on page 37 and a new book - Vultures in Eagle's Clothing. However in some of these books, they give a Title 26 U.S.C. citation such as the famous 7203. You need to know that 26 USC 7203 is also set forth in the Code Of Federal Regulations as 27 CFR 70.42. For those of us who are "leap-frogging" unicorns, this will be vital information for you.

Some Random After-Thoughts For This Issue Of On-Target!

Please read this whole pamphlet before you consider the suggested action to be taken in this column. 1) For a very limited time I have an exact duplicate of the newsprint Sui Juris published on bond paper with a leatherette cover. We only printed 1,000 copies, so they will be a "collectors item" some day. If they are all gone, your money will be refunded. While they still state the cover price as $2.00, this beautiful edition is $10.00 including postage. If not satisfied in every way, return for a refund. I have published this in an effort to recover some of my Boston Mutual losses so I can leave something for Mrs. Davis. 2) On page 22, I have asked my Northpoint Team members to pray that God's Will be done regarding IRS Agent, Mr. Loy. Wouldn't it be wonderful if folks from all over America would send Mr. Loy a nice greeting card, or a picture postcard from your area, that wishes him well and that your group has been praying for him? Sign your first name only, unless you are a John Hancock type. Send your cards to: IRS, 151 Patton Ave, Asheville, NC. Don't be a wise guy or make any comments on my case. Be polite: Remember, you represent the very best of Northpoint Tactical Teams. Whenever you spend time in prayer, naming him specifically before Our Heavenly Father, send Mr. Loy another card. Those of you wonderful Team Members who, it seems, have only military solutions to every problem, will you do me a favor and sit this one out?

How Our Northpoint Tactical Team Office Operates Or The Most Important Part of This On Target!

It is most important, because it lets us help you better and save countless hours of our time. We must repeat again: We do not take orders for our pamphlets over the telephone. This practice has always caused too much confusion here. Whenever I violate my own rule because one of you gets me up in the middle of the night, invariably when the Team Member sends in his money, he fails to record the fact that he has already given his order to me and that it was being sent. So, Betty Lou quite properly sends out a duplicate order and the reader has to either pay again or send it back. One Saturday when I was gone all day, I returned to find 26 calls on my answering machine. I went through them, and only two were of an urgent nature, and not orders. All the rest were orders, relating to prices. "How many copies will $42.00 buy?" Others leave some instructions for me to call some number, usually without disclosing the nature of call. I do not return these calls. Three that day called for legal advice on an IRS problem beginning their recorded message with "I know that you do not practice law and you do not provide advice..." and then they start right off asking me to practice law and give advice. Another day call #2 began with a litany of his traffic court case and he was still talking when the tape ran out. Naturally, I was unable to take any other messages that day.

We handle orders only by mail, and then in the daily sequence received. As we have stated for at least seven years, if you are placing an order with your letter to us, write the word "Order" on the front of the envelope. When we see the word "Order" we pull those out of the mail and handle them first. If you have a very urgent need for pamphlets, as for a meeting, put your order in a "Priority Mail" packet and send it in. Spend the $3.00! Your order will be filled and mailed the same day. We do not send over-night air, and there is no FED-EX here. It will be helpful if you will put your return address, including your zip code on your envelope, your letter and your check or money order. If you have not followed all of these clear and specific instructions, do not call us asking about your order. It will be in the mail that is in our backlog and we will not have the faintest idea where it is until we come to it.

The prices are listed on page two of Sui Juris and our other publications. The reason why we suggest orders of 25, 50 and 100 is that we have shipping boxes sized to fit these orders, and we have several dozen of each size already made up ready to go. When you write in asking for $17.00 or $37.00 worth of Sui Juris you have thrown a monkey wrench into our well-oiled machinery. We will fill your order, of course, but these odd orders are always my job, instead of Betty Lou's, to figure out how to get boxes to fit, etc. We can and do get it done, but you can be very helpful to us if you remember this little detail.

With rare exceptions; I do not read the hundreds of legal briefs sent to me by others' Personally. I am not interested, for I have seen most of these arguments in endless repetition for the past twenty years. Even worse, do not send your briefs, your books or video tapes for us to review and return to you. Come on! You should think of our office as some sort of "huge black hole" where, so far as you are concerned, things strangely disappear into some vortex. Use your head, please. We have lost count over the past five years, but over half a million pamphlets have been printed and mailed out all over America, Canada, Mexico and various other countries of the world. Of that 500,000+ pamphlets, how many letters do you suppose are thus generated? Often we are swamped with mail, and about then someone wants 100 copies of something on consignment and he will send the money if and when he sells them. Or the reader sends in some book, such as how to raise African violets, and wants an equal value of the book in an assortment of our pamphlets. Perhaps the worst offenders are those who write four pages on a computer or typewriter with a faded-out ribbon and places his order somewhere in the text of that letter. If we cannot read it, we cannot help you very much and may not even try. Please think of our eyes when you write to us.

No wonder the patriots are losing! Why slow us down so that it takes ten minutes to fill your order only because you refuse to use a zip-code and we cannot figure the postage on your package without it? Betty Lou has my instructions to return any order that does not have a proper zip-code with it. We do not have time for silly games with such things as zip-codes and c/o in your addresses. Where is the case law for all these quasi-legal schemes, philosophies and scams that would require a five line address label when three lines will do it for you? When they shot and killed Vicki Weaver, they did not do so because her husband, Randy, used a zip-code, had a driver's license, or failed to put the notation c/o before his address.

The problem is that patriots are copying each other and never going back to find out if that pet set of arguments ever won in any District court case much less upheld on appeal. One Guru from Oregon wrote that Sui Juris was all bunk, though he used a different expletive. Guess what? In fifteen years ,or so, that man has never won a case. Well, for that matter, neither have I, for I have never had to appear. If, as is so often the case, you are asking my opinion, once again I do not practice law and give opinions or advice. Socrates gave advice, and they poisoned him. See what you can learn from history? What if I reported that your brief "looks great" and some District judge later shoots it down in flames? Any of you who suppose that you can raise Constitutional legal questions in a Federal District court, have yet to reach first grade in IRS matters. You are in District court pursuant to some contract, or alleged contract, violation, and Constitutional questions do not apply. Furthermore, the Federal District Court tribunal never operates under Constitutional law, even in non-contract matters, for their jurisdiction, if they really have any, originates from Roman Civil Law. Please try to resist the temptation to write us asking for our opinion, or even our praise, for your skillful ability with the language of law, especially until you have won the District court case.

Phone Numbers

When you read Sui Juris, you will note that my personal home address is set forth on the bottom of my letter to The District Director. That is not to be interpreted by you as a "change of address." Perhaps hoping to get ahead of the line with the mail, some of you have been sending your letters to my personal home and UPS address on Flying Colors Drive. We put all those letters at the very end of the line in our backlog of mail.

Do not use that address or any phone number for me but 704-321-4110 under any circumstances except as set forth in the inset shown here. To talk to our office or Betty Lou call between 11 AM and 4 PM Eastern time. Our Northpoint lines are only for what they have been labeled. For instance, the line for Bible questions are only that. Do not discuss legal or health problems with this man. He is neither a doctor nor a lawyer and is not to speak for our Northpoint Teams on these matters. We do not practice law, medicine or naturapathy. Only local Team Members would have any business calling our Northpoint Security line or the lines identified as Rescue and Helps. They will be for local use only. Our Northpoint Team law library phone number, while valid and working, still does not have anyone manning that phone most of the time. We have been receiving far too many FAX messages since I announced that line. Do not presume that I am going to read your FAX the instant it comes off the machine. Unless your FAX involved critical tactical issues that need attention within an hour or two, do me the courtesy of putting your message in a Priority Mail envelope and sending it to me in that manner.

Vultures In Eagle's Clothing I

Years ago, when I was a younger warrior on the Nicaragua frontier, when someone caused me, or one of my Team members grief, our people would go physically after that person. One was Sandinista Commandante Anna Maria Morales, who ordered the torture and murder of our courier, Karen Sacasa Debeye, a niece of President Somoza. One night Senorita Morales was found sleeping in her apartment in Managua, and my assigned Team filled her startled body with 60 rounds from two well directed AK-47's. Using these weapons we make it look like another Sandinista had done the national cleansing deed and he was tried by a Sandinista court-martial and shot. Alas, poor Reggio, la historia cambio en la sierra. The Sandinistas understood far better the nature of our dedication when we took out their lovers and sweethearts. Ladies, if you were married to a Sandinista, or some other brand of Communist, your life was in grave danger. The 28 people involved in the torture of Karen, when she would not betray us, were all terminated.

Today, I have found that national cleansing often takes place by simply putting that person on the very top of my prayer list. Such people then find a way to self-destruct by doing foolish enough things such as flying his plane into the ground or driving her car into a tree. Several have disappeared into bankruptcy, and still more suddenly find themselves going down under the overwhelming burden of a terminal illness. Once I put them on the top of my prayer list, the situation, quite frankly, is out of my hands. It is no longer my problem.

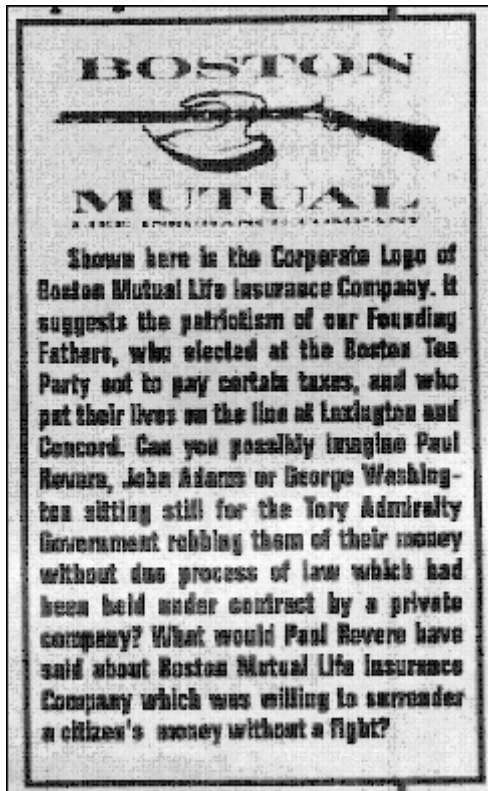

There is a particularly distasteful IRS operative working out of the Asheville, North Carolina office named Mr. Loy. He was that agent that went after my friend, Team Member, Ted Jablonski to whom I dedicated my pamphlet Hope's Husband a few years ago. It was Mr. Loy who confiscated the Jablonski home which was property owned by a Trust. It was Mr. Loy who sold that home in an illegal one bidder auction for only $31,000, about 25% of its real value. The bidder was a Baptist minister imported by the IRS from 200 miles away. I put him on the top of my prayer list, and he was dead within a year. It was Mr. Loy who confiscated Mrs. Jablonski's car and sold it for only $800.00 so that she could not take their Downs Syndrome daughter, age 20, to her special school. It was Mr. Loy who created the situation where Joan Jablonski finally divorced Ted. It is Mr. Loy who makes it his business to go after patriots, wiping them out financially if he can do so. We know of a few others whose names need not be mentioned here who have come under the hob-nailed boots of Mr. Loy. We have to pray for that man that God's Will be done in his, wretched life!

Naturally, as out-spoken as I am about the IRS, I have always known that Mr. Loy was there in the shady background. As I stated early in this On Target!, the matter is not closed between the IRS and Nord Davis, Jr., DOB 10/28/31. For the record, my former SS# is 018-26-1669, just in case one or more of the three-letter boys may be on my mailing list and wish to run a background check on me.

Well, I must confess to my readers of Sui Juris, there was one remaining area of my life in which I was really not Sui Juris. I had not even thought about it until I did not get my usual monthly bill from Boston Mutual Life Insurance Company. I thought it must have been lost in the mail. When the December and January bill did not show up, I called Boston Mutual Life Insurance Company* and was informed by a Secretary there that my policy #392425, which had been in force since I was a young man, that is more than 25 years, had been "surrendered by me" for its cash value. This, I was told, terminated the policy. That is why I had not received any further premium bills. All the premiums had been paid. I denied that I had ever surrendered my 25 year standing policy, and there must be some mistake: No, she told me, a certain Mr. Loy, of the IRS from the Asheville, North Carolina office had demanded and got all cash value, representing thousands and thousands of dollars. So, now, with respect to my Sui

*Boston Mutual Life Insurance Company, 120 Royall Street, Canton, MA 02021, 617-828-7000. Their legal expert is Mr. Brian Joyce. He has made the legal determination that the IRS has the 'right' to take the cash value built up over some 25+ years. Some of you may want to call this man, or Donna Butler, Supervisor of Customer Services and find out if this is really true.

Juris status, one more tie to the system has vanished. As a former cancer patient, and 63, I am now uninsurable.

However, you need to understand that there still exists a contract that was made 25 years ago between Boston Mutual Insurance Company and Nord Davis, Jr. This contract did not include the Internal Revenue Service, Inc. So, the remarks of Boston Mutual's people notwithstanding, they have violated my contract, and gave over money which they had a fiduciary responsibility to protect and which they cannot lawfully release prior to an action in The District Court, where they have no lawful jurisdiction over me. I do not know what the future holds for me, but if you someday learn that I have had some kind of serious encounter with the Internal Revenue Service, Inc., for those of you who may be looking, you will find Mr. Loy lurking somewhere in the shadows.

Leave Mr. Loy to The Lord, and follow with me Christ's orders to "Love your enemies and do good to those who despitefully use you." However, the Grand Theft by Mr. Loy, acting under the color of law, is another matter, for Mr. Loy has violated one of God's National Laws. With our proper prayers, Our Heavenly Father will hold Mr. Loy's feet to the fire in ways that you and I cannot possibly imagine.

Naturally, those of you who own a life insurance policy with Boston Mutual Life Insurance Company, might want to borrow most of its cash value out of it. My goal is to bring about the withdrawal from Boston Mutual Life Insurance Company of at least $1 million dollars. This tactical project will be carried out by my Massachusetts Northpoint Teams over the next 2-3 years. If Boston Mutual does not take it upon themselves to reinstate my policy with no harm or injury to me, and have its cash value returned, we will do whatever it takes to make this the most expensive Corporate policy mistake that Boston Mutual Insurance Company ever made. Mr. Loy did not rob me, because I will not be here to collect! Mr. Loy robbed my wife and I do take that personally.

The Extremely High Risk of Straight Life Insurance

I have done my due diligence by calling other Life Insurance Companies and have learned, from those who will discuss the matter with me, that they "feel obliged" by IRS regulations, that when requested, they are permitted to wipe out a policy holder's cash value without notice. Then, the money taken is regarded as a loan by the policy holder from the insurance company. In some cases, if the policy holder wishes to be reinstated, he must pay a year's premium in advance. They will deduct the value of the "loan" plus 5% interest from the payment at the time of the policy holder's death. That is their position, but the fact is that if the IRS can unlawfully take the money the first time, and the Company violates its own contracts with the policy holders, I am certain that the IRS will have a lien with the company; and take it all as soon as the policy holder dies.

Is it not the nature of vultures to get their spoils from the dead? It never occurred to me, twenty-five years ago, that I might have a problem with the Internal Revenue Service years into the future, and wind up having no coverage exactly when I need it the most. I was never informed that the Company had the right to waive their contract with the policy holder, and in the event of a on-going illness that they could deny that policy holder his insurability in his later years.

My conclusion to this whole matter is that I do not advise anyone to hold whole life or pay life insurance policies. Their value could vanish over night, with no recourse, in the event the policy holder has a problem with the Internal Revenue Service, Inc. If you are approached by any life insurance salesman,

{{Editors Comment: I think that the point made here is that it is unwise to have any assets that are visible to the government and/or the Internal Revenue Service, Inc.}}

why not find out their company's legal determination about the true validity of their policy contract. If you find one whose policy is not to deliver their policy holder's cash value to the IRS, please let me know. These are not the financial times when using an insurance policy as a form of savings is really worth the high risks involved. Cash your policies now or make a loan against them to the limit. Let's see how many insurance companies we can start a financial run on. Watch out for the "Mr. Loy" in your home town. There will always be one there.

Vultures In Eagle's Clothing - II

On page 37 of Sui Juris, I listed seven source books that I thought would be helpful in understanding your American status. Please understand that I do not necessarily endorse every line or stated fact in any of these books. I am now adding another to the list. I suggest you buy Vultures In Eagle's Clothing, by Lynne Meredith. Here is one patriot lady who has done a really wonderful job, even though you will find that she differs with Sui Juris here and there. For instance, she has the meaning of national and federal reversed. Order it anyway, for she is correct on 95% of what I have been able to read. It has large print, and double spaced lines for easy reading. It has a 211 page + Appendix consisting of Freedom Forms. There are dozens of good typical letters all done for you. How about a Written Request for IRS Determination Letter? How much of your time would it take to prepare such a letter? How about a Certified Demand for Proof of Jurisdiction Letter? Would you know how to compose such a letter, and get it right? Lynne Meredith has done your homework for you. This is a basic book at the beginning so that all Americans who read it will understand the issues and why some of us are so adamant about what we believe. You do not have to be a rocket scientist or a legal student to understand her book. I wish I had known about it at the time I wrote Sui Juris, for it would have saved me hundreds of hours of research work. I cannot think of a better person to dedicate this announcement of

to than Asheville's notorious Mr. Loy.

Vultures In Eagle's Clothing costs $40.00 + $3.00 postage. Almost any page in this book is worth the money if you are ensnared by an alleged contract with the IRS. Write: We, The People, 17011 Beach Blvd., Suite 900, Huntington Beach, California Republic, 92647. Say Northpoint sent you, though I have not asked for nor do I expect, any form of commission. As you read "Vultures...", pray for both Mr. Loy and Nord Davis, Jr.

Nord Davis, Jr. Inducted Into The International Hall Of Fame

After disclosing the bad news about my Boston Mutual Life Insurance Policy losses, this is probably as good a place as any to give you the good news of this humbling Award for our activities in Amman, Jordan before and during the Desert Storm War. The background to this Award can be found in my book, Desert Shield and The New World Order. [$5.00 + $2.00 for postage and packaging.] The District had other plans in the war with Iraq than turned out. They did not appreciate that only a few hundred Americans died when it had been estimated that some 39,000 of our best men would perish there. Desert Shield and The New World Order gives you the truth and the Northpoint Tactical Team part which we played in it. Soon after that, there began a renewed effort on the part of the IRS to stop and silence Nord Davis, Jr. Hence, we see the plunder of my wife's insurance estate by Mr. Loy, and the perfidy of Boston Mutual Life Insurance Company. Critics of our publications must understand that the Northpoint Tactical Teams, and Nord Davis, Jr. are not boasting when we make these announcements as with this wonderful Award and recognition. There are other people, new readers as well as old enemies, who need to know exactly what we are doing for America and the resultant Awards and honors bestowed upon us. In Sui Juris, the mention of these activities had to be put there, as a witness for any jury that may one day be reading it in its official capacity. How can they convict a man who is known to have found the means to prevent the terrible expected losses of American servicemen's lives in the Persian Gulf War? My International Hall Of Fame Award is an Honorary Doctorate of Humanities. So, formally, it is Nord Davis, Jr. Ph.D. I have held a Doctorate since 1975 in Naturapathic Medicine, but feel that of all that is out there, I know so very little, that I have never used Dr. before my name. As scholars know, the term doctor really means teacher. So, please think of me as only a teacher of natural healing and a teacher of humanities through my publications only. Do not write or call me about your aches and pains, please. As with our non-practice of law, we do not practice naturapathy.

The District's Federal Income Tax Loopholes

As I have stated in Sui Juris, the Freeman status will not be for everyone who supports the Northpoint Teams. Anyone over 55 who is in The District system, should probably sit this battle out on the sidelines. Why, after paying into Socialist Security all these years, would you want to abandon this financial protection for the rest of your life? Likewise, if you are a young person with a family, and working at a good job or profession, but are close to the edge financially, the Freeman route may not be a wise move for you. Your first God-given duty is to support your family. There is no excuse for failure to do that!

After Sui Juris was published, we have received hundreds of letters and scores of phone calls asking us for direct help with their problems. We cannot do that! Until you have studied the seven books on page 37 in Sui Juris, and studied Lynn Meredith's "Vultures," I do not want to hear from any of you regarding any problems. However, there are hundreds of you who want help in saving money while you are filing IRS 1040 Label Forms. So, along that line, there is a 338 page book listing an incredible number of legal loopholes, enough to probably reduce the Income Tax liability to almost nothing for most Americans. I am not compromising my position in Sui Juris. I will never back down from what I know to be the truth, even if Mr. Loy manages to strip me of everything I have, and has me confined stark naked in a solitary cell. He would like to do that, you know. The difference between me and younger people is that my children are grown, and I have taken steps so that Mrs. Davis will be well taken care of.

Remember, the wealthy folks who draw up the confusing language of the IRS regulations, are not going to pay any more than they have to. Half of the Fortune 500 Companies, the wealthiest Corporations in America, pay no Federal Income Tax at all! Mr. Loy's job is not to go after the wealthy, but to undercut the prosperity of the working and professional middle class. The wealthy do not remain wealthy by paying out 50% of their assets or earnings every year. There are some special tactics and deductions which they use, so that these rich keep on getting richer. You can keep the vultures away by doing things a whole lot smarter. The name of the book is Tax Loopholes. Everything The Law Allows. It is published by Boardroom Classics, PO Box 11401, Des Moines, IA 50336-1401. The published price is $50.00, but for a short time, it is available for only $35.00. Tell them when you write that Mr. Loy of Asheville recommended this book to you.

A Captain Of Destiny

First Published by Nord Davis, Jr. in April, 1986

The wind was blowing briskly over the chimney top drawing the smoke from his hearth, as a father of four sat thinking, the heat of the fire glazing his eyes. It was the Spring of 1775. As the twilight began to fall on his modest home in Acton, Massachusetts, this young man wondered just what tomorrow would bring. His daily chores were done and an extra pile of wood had been stacked inside, handy for Hannah. He expected to be gone for awhile. The leak around the chimney would have to wait for another day. There were important things to be doing in the morning...

This young father had married his sweetheart, a lady named Hannah Leighton of Acton. He had learned the gun-smithing trade. His personal future looked pretty good, and why not? He had built his own home, had a nice family, and a steady business repairing firearms. It had been a warm Spring that year. According to the records, Hannah was occupied that evening with the children's colds. Even the youngest of just fifteen months was letting the household know of her suffering and plight. The young man was left with his thoughts: Less than a dozen hours to muster. But, with Spring in the air, everything going better than expected, how could he complain? How good it is to be free! We will settle some things tomorrow...

We might expect that any young man, as unusually blessed with home, family and business, might tend to overlook the problems being created by some of the King's Men [which is to say... the government's men]. After all, what could one man do about such complex and far-reaching problems? Wasn't his first duty to his family? Yes, but according to the Scriptures, there always comes a point when the affairs of the nation must come ahead of the needs of the family. This was one of those times. Fortunately, this was not a young man who simply looked to the rewards and the pleasures of the day. He was not one to close his eyes in a dream world of security, but was one whose eyes, for his family's sake, were fixed on the years ahead. Something had to be done about the Red Coats who were presuming [asserting] themselves into the affairs of free men.

The Lord, he knew with certainty, had put him into a vital position to do some good. The Lord had called him to be a leader of men and, as a gunsmith, his trade was to be needed in the cause of liberty. Liberty, as he told Hannah, is never given by legislatures.

It has always been obtained, and will be held only, by those who are willing to fight and die for it. When men cease to be willing to fight for it, it will only be a matter of time before free men are once again slaves of others. Months and months before, this young man -- who had everything to both lose and to fight for -- organized a Company of Minutemen in his home town of Acton, Massachusetts. Acton? Who today has ever heard of such a place? Yes, we remember our history lessons about the brave men of Lexington and Concord. We know about the midnight ride of Paul Revere and his group called the "Committee of Safety." We can think of many others... but this young man and his Acton Militia, is generally unknown to even our most ardent patriots today. His name was Captain Isaac Davis.

As Captain Davis sat watching the sparks crawling along the soot on the back of his fireplace that night, over in Concord a young wife, Mrs. Lucy Barnes Hosmer, was entering her concerns about the next day. A copy of her diary* for Tuesday, April 18, 1775, is in my library.- Mrs. Hosmer wrote:

I really don't have time to spare from our household chores to write in this journal - - and yet, I must, to calm my nerves and enable me to think clearly about these perilous times. This I must surely do to help my husband, Joseph Hosmer, our four children, and our dear village of Concord. No shots have yet been fired but already we are a

*Although my family home is in Shirley Center, Massachusetts, about 25 miles from Acton, Captain Issac Davis is not related to our family. Here on flying Colors Memorial Drive, we have erected a Memorial to Captain Isaac Davis. wartime community... for months now, our household, and those of our neighbors have given over the major portions of our lives to the task of preparing Concord for war... What I mind more than the hiding of weapons is the need to watch out for Tories and spies amongst our own townspeople...

Much of the time I am too busy to be anxious. But at night, after my work is done, I do worry and manily about Joseph. Some of our neighbors say that all this anger at the Mother Country started here-about with the speech he gave last year at the Middlesex Convention when he defended our rights against Mr. Daniel Bliss, the famous Tory lawyer, who mocked our folly in resisting the mighty British empire and urged us all to stand loyally by King George and Old England.

I was proud of my husband that day. Mr. Bliss stood up in front of the Convention, handsome in his fine clothes, with a sarcastic smile on his face. Joseph was near the back of the room wearing a plain butternut suit that I had spun, wove, and dyed for him. At first he spoke slowly as if he was feeling his way with the words; but he wound up with such eloquence that he confounded Mr. Bliss and set our neighbors on fire with new ideas of our rights and freedom. Folks, even lawyer Bliss himself, they say, has been naming my Joseph the most dangerous man in Concord, ever since. And that makes me both proud and frightened. Joseph is thirty-nine years old now and our neighbors say his influence over the young men of the town is strong, and where he leads, they'll follow.

{{April 19, 1775 - First battle of the Revolutionary War

A detailed analysis of the event by General Parton, a chemical engineer and explosives expert, points out that the damage done could not have been the lone result of the RYDER truck containing a fertilizer bomb. General Parton's analysis clearly indicates that cutting charges had to be placed on support columns inside the building by someone having authorized access.}}

Yesterday the Committee of Safety ordered the dispersal of the military supplies here in Concord into the neighboring towns. Last night, Joseph and I drove by ox team two wagon loads of ammunition from Acton to hide on Deacon Jonathan Hosmer's farm there. His twenty-year-old son, Abner, is Joseph's third cousin and Acton Minuteman.

Lucy Hosmer was quite correct. Abner Hosmer was not only an Acton Minuteman, but Captain Davis's right-hand man! Just before dawn on April 19, 1775, Captain Davis quietly mustered his men. All equipment was checked out. Abner Hosmer was there and his training was to meter out the cadence on his drum ---120 beats to the minute. Carrying a drum, he would go into the battle unarmed. James Haywood was there. The fifer, Luther Blanchard, got there just as the red morning sun stabbed its welcome light through the naked trees surrounding the Davis homestead. This was the day that this Company had been training for, and the Acton men were ready. Captain Davis had not only trained his men well, but as you will learn here for the first time, instilled in them an unusual spirit of dedication to Christ and Country.

Yes, yes, there was the serious matter concerning taxation, and certain other grievances against the King, but at the level of the Acton and Concord Minutemen, the issue was the confiscation of firearms. Today, they would be called assault weapons.

{ {Standing up for freedom is not easy... it takes more than a big mouth! Supporting those with the courage to stand up for freedom takes more than lip service from a safe distance! - Michael H. Keehn} }

"All present or accounted for, Sir!" a sergeant quietly called out, and the small band of men moved out for their six mile march to Concord. Every second, on the second, came the beat of Abner Hosmer's drum. The fifer was silent. It was in Concord that The King's Men were searching house to house for arms --but now you know where they were -- in Deacon Hosmer's barn in Acton. and driven there by a courageous woman named Lucy just the night before! Yes, yes, there was the serious matter concerning taxation, and certain other grievances against the King, but at the level of the Acton and Concord Minutemen, the issue ,was the confiscation of firearms. Today, they would be called assault weapons.

Well, you know much of the rest of the story. Some three hundred patriots converged on Concord from all the surrounding towns to confront the Red Coats. It was about 10 AM and the village of Concord was nearly deserted. The women and children had left to be safe with friends. All the Minutemen were assembled on the north side of town near the North Bridge where six Companies of British soldiers were poised to attack. Lucy Hosmer wrote:

The Reverend William Emerson, who is always impetuous (even Phoebe, his wife, says so) proposed: 'Let's go after them and fight 'em right now!' But Colonel Barrett ignored this from The Cloth and ordered our men to withdraw to a position on the heights above the North Bridge where they would be near enough to see what was going on there.

I have inserted this information from Lucy to show you that during the early days of America, not only the Old North Church in Boston was involved in the cause of Christian liberty but so were the ministers throughout the Colonies who were directly involved.. Pastor Emerson was there, and Deacon Hosmer was hiding arms, and had his son right out there in front. Those were the Good Old Days... The Red Coats, over-confident as agents of Admiralty government have a fatal tendency to be, sent in some men to the abandoned Concord village and began to steal whatever they could find from the abandoned homes. Lucy Hosmer then gives us an insight into what happened that many of us have not known about before and a lesson that we can all use today:

"... Then they set the village Liberty Pole on fire just to mock us. That fire got out of control and spread to the roof of the Court House, which surely would have been destroyed if it hadn't been for old Martha Moulton, who keeps house for Dr. Minot. She saw the Court House beginning to burn and rushed up to some British Officers, who were standing nearby on the green, and implored them to put out the fire. At first they laughed at her and mocked her pleas. But, she kept on pleading loudly and gave them no peace until they did put out the fire."

Here is the interesting part! The patriots over by the North Bridge could not see what was going on in town, but they did see the billowing smoke which continued as the Red Coats were giving the widow a hard time. Imagine, the only one who dared to confront the Red Coats was this frail old lady. That pattern is being seen again and again today in Christian America.

However, as recorded in Lucy Hosmer's Journal, it was the smoke of the burning Liberty Pole and the Court House roof that actually triggered the Minutemen into combat?

{{There are those among us who would like to see the spirit displayed by widow Moulton in today's American woman. Would it not be great to see our American ladies having a thought other than... "where am I going to shop next?" }}

Understand, the Red Coats were on the Concord side of the North Bridge, and to take Concord to save the town, it was necessary for the Minutemen to cross the bridge in the face of British fire. Since the immediate military mission was to save Concord, the honor of leading the troops fell to the Concord Company. Instead, according to historical facts, the Concord Captain asked to be excused on the grounds that some of his men were not prepared, and others were afraid. Confusion and doubts were beginning to spread among the men. At that moment the steel voice of Captain Isaac Davis came thundering over and through the confusion. It was the only direct statement of his that has ever been recorded, but it was the right one at exactly the right time in American history:

"I haven't a man who is afraid to go!"

Immediately, he marched his Acton Company to the head of the column of Minutemen. Lucy Hosmer wrote:

“They marched in double file toward the North Bridge to the fife strains of ‘The White Cockade’ with Captain Issac Davis’s company in the front of the lines. As they advanced they could see three British companies crowding together at the far end of the bridge. Two or three of the Red Coats were observed trying to pull up the planks! But they soon gave up and ran back to their companions. Our men marched nearer and nearer to the bridge to the beat of Abner Hosmer’s drum. The British fired warning shots into the air. Our men were marching forward. Suddenly, the Red Coats fired a volley and Abner Hosmer and his Captain, Issac Davis, fell dead... Joseph said that the battle of North Bridge did not take more than two or three minutes, but I’ll wager that those brief moments will not be forgotten by any of our people.”

This first organized attack against the Red Coats, and King George's Admiralty regulations was led by an Acton, Massachusetts man whose name, Isaac Davis, is all but forgotten today. He led the attack from the Northpoint of Concord, one of the historical significance's of what we call today, The Northpoint Teams. The other place called Northpoint, was Northpoint, Maryland, where the British land forces were stopped by the Independent Blues. That military effort created the situation wherein Francis Scott Key wrote our

{} Admiralty = Roman Civil Law
{} Admiralty = Corporate Law
{} Admiralty = Law of the District {}

National Anthem. Let the record show that this stirring song was never called the Federal Anthem. Caveat! History has a way of repeating itself, and if it is to begin, let it begin just outside of Boston.

One history book carries this account of those fateful two minutes that initiated the course of American liberty:

"As they marched toward the Red Coats, the shrill and stirring music of Luther Blanchard's fife pierced the morning air. Weapons were loaded and primed. Hammers were cocked as they got into range of the British rifles. Bang! A puff of smoke appeared followed closely by the report of a British rifle. Two more followed in quick succession. Fifer Blanchard was hit and the fife was heard no more. A strange silence hung about three feet off the ground for about thirty seconds, and then came the first volley from the British. Captain Isaac Davis and the drummer Abner Hosmer, were killed instantly. The war, hardly begun, was over for them."

For a few moments, the death of Captain Davis and Fifer Hosmer stunned the Acton Company. This was now the real thing! Over it all came the thundering voice of Major Buttrick, the Commanding Officer of the Concord Company:

"Fire, fellow soldiers, for God's Sake, Fire!"

So, fire they did. That battle near Concord's North Bridge was the one which set the stage for the greatest land of liberty that mankind has ever known. The battle began 'when King George's International Military Forces, very similar to the so called Multi-Jurisdictional Task Force IMJ771 now operating unlawfully throughout America, attempted to disarm the Americans. This almost unknown military group {{the Multi-Jurisdictional Task Force}}, as well as that group known as "The ATF {{Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms}}," are not American, but are under the command of the United Nations New World Order. Such international forces have the trademark of burning things, from the Liberty Pole in Concord in 1775, to Waco in recent times. Is anyone "burning your Liberty Pole" yet?

Victory on April 19, 1775, was not inspired by such great patriots as Washington, Revere and John Adams. If Boston Mutual Life Insurance Company were commanding the affairs on the North Bridge, we might all still be Tories! They would have informed the patriots that they must be loyal to the King, no matter what! In the very beginning, the very first shots were inspired by one long forgotten man, Captain Isaac Davis, who was ordained of God to die so that you and I would enjoy the liberty we have. French's History of Concord states that:

"...it was the bravery and devotion of Captain Davis that began the memorable war which, with the help of God, was to bring independence to the thirteen colonies perched precariously on the shores of the Great American Wilderness."

In the Providence of Almighty God, whose skillful Hand determines the affairs of all men, Captain Isaac Davis was not called to be among those long remembered as a hero of the War for Independence. Most Americans have never heard of Acton or its gallant Isaac Davis. Although his name is almost never associated with it, the famous Minuteman statue is of this unsung hero, the father of a young family of four. Apparently in the Great Plan of a merciful Father, his was to be one single purpose -- at exactly the right moment in history to say:

"I haven't a man who is afraid to go!"

May The Lord be as gracious to each of us as He was to Captain Isaac Davis.

Epilogue

In seventy days, it will be April 19, 1995, two hundred and twenty years since Captain Davis, Abner Hosmer, the drummer, and the fifer Blanchard took the first shots at the Northpoint of Concord. After a long day in my study, I often wonder about tomorrow. I know that nothing can happen to me, as with Captain Davis, that The Lord has not already determined. I remember the story of the Baptist who inquired of the Puritan why he carried his musket to church. If you believe all is predestined and foreordained (Romans 8 & 91, if it is intended by The Almighty for the Indian to get you, he will regardless of the musket. If he is not foreordained to kill you, then the musket certainly will not be necessary. The Puritan's reply was that he carried the musket to church just in case he ran across an Indian whose time had come.

How will my readers know just when the Red Coats are coming, and our time for the terrible action that is surely to come? What will be the sign that someone is about to burn down our Liberty Pole?

If we wait until we see military in Red Coats or the devil in a Red Suit, we will have waited until it is too late. We need to watch out for the military in Federal Black uniforms and devils in Black Robes sitting behind The District Court benches. It will be seen in the attitudes of Attorney Bliss in Concord in 1775, or Attorney Brian Joyce of Boston Mutual in 1995, who are both amorally indifferent to the plunder of the people.* When you talk to either Attorney Joyce or Boston Mutual's Supervisor Donna Butler, you will not detect the slightest bit of sympathy or empathy in {{How will we know when our freedom is to end? How will we know when our productivity will all belong to someone else and not any to ourselves? How will we know when we are to be enslaved?}}

If we wait until we see military in Red Coats or the devil in a Red Suit, we will have waited until it is too late.

*Do you know what the word "attorney" means and where it comes from in law? Look up the word attornment in Black's Law Dictionary and you will see that it is the turning over of the rights or money of one person in a contract to a third person not in the contract. So, an attorney is one who takes funds from one person and gives it to a third party. Attorney Joyce "attorned" my property, i.e. the cash value of my 25-year-old Boston Mutual Life Insurance policy contract to a third party, the IRS, as 'a permissible successor party' to the contract. That is only one sign that the Red Coats are already here.

{{And that the Tories are among us! It's pretty clear that the sacrifices of those before us do not mean a thing to these two women of Boston Mutual!}} their voices for this one policy holder's loss. That, too, is an indicator that the Red Coats are here in the form of the Internal Revenue Service, Inc., whose "Mr. Loys" have our people afraid to do even the right and moral thing.

We were a race of people who had the Laws of God written in our hearts.

One of the problems today's Christian patriots have overlooked is that we have a far different America than that which existed 225 years ago. In those days, America was primarily of one race and one culture. We were that specific race that had the Laws of God written in our hearts and minds as set forth in Hebrews 8:8-10. There was none of this nonsense that "God's Laws had been done away with..." In those days, traitors and murderers were hanged or shot. Thieves were whipped or put into stocks and left out in the weather day and night. Everyone in the town could take a good look at them and take notice of who they were. Captain Isaac Davis, his men and his society were taught the uplifting Puritan Work Ethic and were Calvinistic in Bible doctrine. Make no mistake about it, it was this concept of the sovereignty of God in the affairs of men and nations that brought about, as a natural fruit, the Liberty that we say we hold so dear. In reality, most Americans give Liberty rather poor lip-service. {{This last sentence is sad but true. Freedom requires that one be responsible for themselves and in so many ways, we Americans wish to be children and have others (generally the government) take care of us so that we don't have to be responsible for ourselves.}}

In researching again the story of The Captain Of Destiny, I discovered something that I did not know. As you know, there was no direct daily communication between the Colonies, such as we have today. There was no way, for instance that the Colony of Connecticut could have possibly known of the great events to be taking place on April 19th. Paul Revere, and the riders of the Committee of Safety, didn't even know about it until the lantern signals on April 18th. Not realizing what was to happen in Concord at Northpoint, the Governor of Connecticut proclaimed on the same day, April 19, 1775, to be a day of fasting and prayer. The Proclamation read in part:

“...that God would graciously pour out his holy spirit on us to bring us through Repentance and effectual Reformation that our iniquities (violations of The Law) may not be our ruis; that He would restore, preserve and secure the Liberties of this and all the other British American colonies, and make the land a mountain of Holiness, and a Habitation of Righteousness forever.”

-Christian History of the American Revolution, p. 407.

Now you know why the bullets which killed Captain Isaac Davis, and drummer Abner Hosmer were “the shots heard around the world.” Once again, the Red Coats are coming --just as they are, even now amongst us, as vultures in eagle's clothing. Do you not see the smoke of the burning Liberty Pole? Where is everyone? Muster the troops! Muster the troops!

Under the unction of the Holy Spirit, all of Connecticut was praying for America, but notice that they were doing so after the battle of North Bridge was already over! The battle was not over for the rest of the Minutemen that day. Lucy Hosmer writes:

“...Then the Minutemen disappeared - - - some to go home. But Joseph (Hosmer) and some of his men carried Abner Hosmer's body and that of Captain Davis to Major Buttrick's farm nearby. Many of the Minutemen didn't stop fighting but ran through the fields to the East Quarter of Concord, thinking to intercept the retreating Redcoats there. But, these men were acting without orders from any officer. There were all kinds of rumors flying around... such that the Redcoats believed that our men were taking scalps of their wounded. 'Tis a horrible thought, and of course, not true. But hearing of it turned Major Pitcairn's hot British blood cold! About noon today (April 19th) the Redcoats began their retreat to Boston, going back the way they came — by the Bary road, but without the glory of their fife and drum with which they arrived in our village. Waiting for them behind a ridge *which runs beside the road were the Minutemen who had run leaderless across the fields to head them off. As the British came into sight, marching in precise military formation, our men opened fire on them Indian fashion, each man for himself. A great many Redcoats soon lay dead and the rest were demoralized. Near Fish Hill in Lexington, they broke ranks and fled. Many of our Minutemen, including Joseph and his brother Benjamin, pursued the Redcoats all the way back to Cambridge... My dear husband is safe at home now and all our family secure under one roof, thank God. The house is very still and all but me are asleep.

When I entered the military service during the Korean War, there was a certain ceremony in which I pledged to defend America "...against all enemies, foreign and domestic." Who would expect that most of my life would be spent in fighting the domestic enemies. My task is not to tell you what to do or how to do it. I am but a Watchman who calls attention to the billowing smoke of the Liberty Pole and the potential destruction of the Common Law Court House. -Nord Davis, Jr., Northpoint
